'Got any real scary books, sir?' is probably the question I get asked most frequently in the library. They mean Stephen King. However, I wouldn't shrink from offering this one. Ten European fold tales are told engagingly without gratuitous nastiness. 'The Houndpriest of Melrose' follows the rejuvenating quaffs of blood theme, as does 'The Creature of Croglin Grange', whilst 'The Phantom Bride' delves into ancient, pagan beliefs and magics. 'The Beast of Auvergne' sees a young wife bereft of her bejewelled hand after attacking her husband's best friend, she in the shape of a wolf. Worth a classroom copy.
